RESPONSE TO RESTRICTION REQUIREMENT

Responsive to the action mailed October 10, 2006, the Applicants elect the invention of Group I drawn to the embodiment of methods of evaluating test agents for the ability to modulate heart function comprising contacting a wild-type zebrafish with a test agent and determining changes in heart function.

The Applicants traverse on the ground that there would be no serious burden on the examiner to search Groups I and II or, in the alternative, claims 1-60 (Groups I and II, in part) together. The Applicants ask that the Examiner identify how the search terms would differ for examination of Groups I and II or, in the alternative, claims 1-60. It is not persuasive that searching the claimed methods would necessitate different searches merely because a transgenic animal is used in some embodiments and wild type animals are used in another.

No statement herein is an admission that any claim or embodiment is obvious over another. The Applicants reserve the right to rejoin any claim, including a claim of the groups traversed above as appropriate and to present additional reasons for traversing the restriction requirement.
